

Tom holds a BS in Construction Management from North Dakota State University and has been involved in the construction industry for the past 30 years in both general contracting as a project manager and as a subcontractor Project Manager. His current position with Life Time has him traveling throughout the United States meeting and vetting subcontractors and suppliers for their current aggressive expansion.